Through a door, I see a dark-haired female figure (appearing similar to a former lover) standing with her husband and child, or perhaps children. She is calling for me to join her in the room with her family. As I move towards her, I become aware of the space I am in - which is this smallish trapezoidal space, shaped almost like a truncated pyramid, but on its side. This room, though well lit, feels much too small for me... and somehow not right.

As I go forward, entering the larger space with the family, this room feels very homey and contains a hearth like in old-fashioned kitchens. The woman (whom I still feel I know) stands in the center of this rather square room, with her husband and children seated around a square table. She works over a round bowl on the table, and her presence conveys a soft, warm and comforting sense as she beckons me to - come closer.

I am left wondering - is she mixing, cooking up, some further unity for me in this square space with a circular bowl - enlarging or righting of my pyramidal shape?
